5 Things We're Talking About this week!

Blake Lively ogles husband Ryan Reynolds

For the actress's 33rd birthday on Aug. 25, the Deadpool star brought her a cake—with a side of his biceps. Lively zoomed in on his arm on her Instagram Story and wrote, "Happy Birthday to me."

Bring It On stars have sequel ideas

Must be some Toros in the atmosphere! During a virtual reunion, Gabrielle Union said a new movie could feature her and Kirsten Dunst as "co-heads of the PTA." Dunst suggested they "run a cheer school like [Netflix's] Cheer."

New Couple Alert! "She's a positive, fun girl," an insider says of Poturalski (in 2018).

Brad's Hot New Romance

Brad Pitt wrapped up his summer with a trip to the South of France—with a new woman by his side. The Oscar winner, 56, was spotted at Le Castellet Airport on Aug. 26 with German model Nicole Poturalski, 27. The pair, who were first photographed chatting and laughing together in a VIP box at the Hollywood Bowl during a Kanye West concert in November, appear to be taking their relationship to a new level with the romantic getaway. "They are spending some time together on vacation and are enjoying each other's company while traveling," says a source.

One thing the pair have in common: Both are parents. Poturalski is mom to a young son whom she shares with German restaurateur Roland Mary, 68, while Pitt is dad to six kids with Angelina Jolie, 45. (While a judge ruled Pitt and Jolie, who split in 2016, were legally single last year, they have yet to finalize their divorce.)

Fairy-Tale Romance
Pitt (inset, in Berlin in 2019) spent time with Poturalski at Château Miraval (below).

Although Poturalski is currently off social media, she previously gave followers a look into her life as a mom. In February she shared a photo walking with her son, writing, "Angel Energy. Best Friend. Best Company. Gang!" And in May she posted a message of encouragement to fellow mothers: "Little love letter to all moms, that try so hard, give so much love, time and heart. Don't sleep, worry too much and love even more. You are great." Known as Nico Mary in the industry, Poturalski has found success as a model, recently appearing on Elle Germany's September 2020 cover.

She and Pitt were first spotted together at a party after the August 2019 Berlin premiere of his movie Once upon a Time in Hollywood… "They were very flirty," says a witness. Since then, a source says, they have met up a handful of times in L.A. and France. For their latest rendezvous, Pitt brought Poturalski to Château Miraval, the French castle and vineyard he and Jolie bought in 2011. Pitt often travels to the estate to participate in the harvest of the grapes used to create its popular rosé wine.

While the relationship is still in the early stages, the actor appears to be enjoying his time with Poturalski. "She has spunk and is smart," says an industry insider. "She's a hoot. Very light and funny. If she is dating Brad Pitt, he's getting a good girl." —MIA McNIECE with reporting by Peter Mikelbank

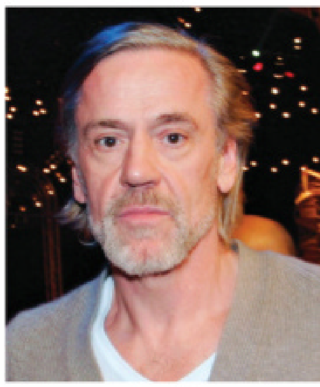
The 5'10" blue-eyed model was born in Warsaw before moving to Berlin at the age of 16 to pursue modeling. Despite her bustling career, a source says, her main focus is her son. "She loves being a mother," an industry source says of Poturalski, who shares her son with restaurateur Roland Mary (right). When asked what superpower she wished she had, she responded on her A Management profile: "Traveling in time so I can visit all those amazing and historic events myself, including the future."



Katy & Orlando Welcome Baby Daisy!

Katy Perry has a lot to "Smile" about this summer. On Aug. 26 the pop star and fiancé Orlando Bloom, 43, announced the arrival of their first child, daughter Daisy Dove. "We are floating with love and wonder," the couple, who got engaged in 2019, said in a statement. Two days later, Perry, 35, dropped her sixth album, Smile, from the hospital. "Katy and the baby have been doing well," says a source close to Bloom, who is also dad to son Flynn, 9, with ex-wife Miranda Kerr. "Orlando is excited to have a baby girl." A smitten Perry told People, "She will always be the No. 1 most important thing ever." —BRIANNE TRACY with reporting by Pernilla Cedenheim

Troubled Triangle
"They approached me," Granda (far left) says of his relationship with Falwell Jr. and Becki.

Sex Scandal

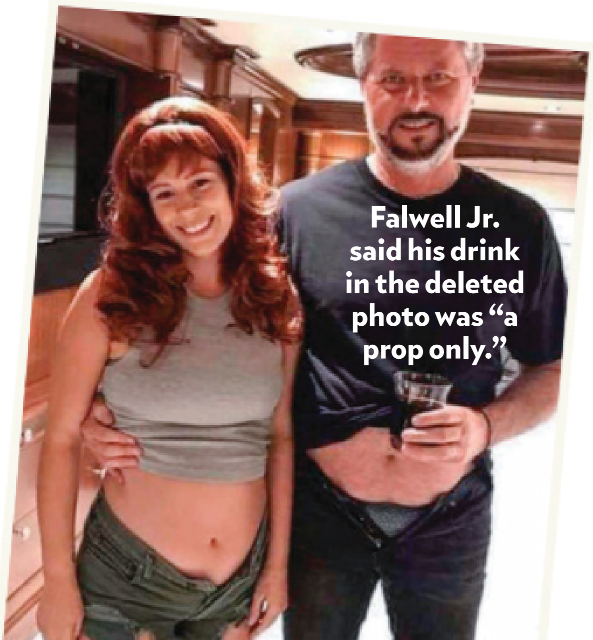
The Pastor, His Wife & the Pool Boy

When Jerry Falwell Jr., one of the country's most prominent evangelical leaders, posted a photo on Aug. 2 with his pants unzipped and his arm around his wife Becki's assistant, the ensuing controversy sparked him to quickly delete the photo—and take an "indefinite leave of absence" from his role as Liberty University president. But the scandal surrounding Falwell Jr., 58, was only beginning. On Aug. 24 Giancarlo Granda, a former pool attendant at the Fontainebleau Miami Beach hotel, came forward with claims that he "developed an intimate relationship" with Becki after befriending the Falwells during their vacation in March 2012 when he was 20. Over the next six years, Granda, 29, told Reuters, he met with the couple "multiple times per year" to have sex with Becki, 53, while "Jerry enjoyed watching from the corner of the room"—behavior that contradicts Liberty's strict code of conduct established by its late founder and Jerry's dad, pastor Jerry Falwell Sr. Their relationship eventually turned contentious when Granda allegedly tried to end things. Granda claimed that the Falwells gave him an ownership stake in a youth hostel that they purchased in 2013, and he wanted to cash in. Falwell Jr. agreed to pay Granda an undisclosed sum for the share. Falwell Jr. disputes Granda's claims, explaining in his own statement on Aug. 23 that he had no part in the sexual relationship and Granda was extorting them for money. "It was like living on a roller coaster," Jerry told the Washington Examiner. Days later Becki also spoke out and confirmed the extramarital affair while backing her husband's claim that he was not involved. "We have the strongest relationship, and Jerry is the most forgiving person I've ever met," Becki, who has three children with Falwell Jr., told the Associated Press. "It's a shame that Christians can't give us the same forgiveness that Christ gave us." The fallout led Falwell Jr. to resign from his post at Liberty on Aug. 25. "The only reason I resigned [was] because I don't want something my wife did to harm the school I've spent my whole life building," he told the AP. Amid the whirlwind scandal, Becki found herself entangled in more allegations involving a former Liberty student who said she was the "aggressor" in a 2008 sexual encounter. (The Falwells both denied the claims.)

'JERRY ENJOYED WATCHING FROM THE CORNER OF THE ROOM'
—GIANCARLO GRANDA

Falwell Jr.—a key ally of many of the country's leading conservative politicians, including President Trump—is now stepping out of the spotlight, while Granda continues to stand by his claims. Falwell Jr. "was aware from day one" of the affair with Becki "and he did, in fact, watch," Granda told Good Morning America, adding in a statement, "The whole truth will come out."

—JOELLE GOLDSTEIN



Falwell Jr. said his drink in the deleted photo was "a prop only."

Jessica Simpson on Life in Quarantine

The singer opens up about turning 40, embracing insecurities and spending quality time at home with husband Eric Johnson, 40, and their kids Maxwell, 8, Ace, 7, and Birdie, 17 months, during the pandemic.

You slipped into 14-year-old skinny jeans to commemorate your 40th birthday—what prompted that? I haven't put jeans on throughout quarantine, so to put those on and for them to fit, I was in complete shock. It was a good 40th-birthday present. I just thought my hips, from having babies, would never go back, but the jeans went up.

How are you staying in shape? I have three kids that I'm chasing around all day every day and the most active husband ever. If you marry an athlete, you've got to stay on your feet.

You're getting to watch Birdie grow every day in quarantine. Any fun new milestones? Birdie's laughing—like, cackling—so that is a contagious thing throughout the family. And her first word was "Ace," for her big brother.

> 'FOR ME, QUARANTINE HAS BEEN AN ENLIGHTENING, PRAYERFUL EXPERIENCE'
> —JESSICA SIMPSON

You're a spokesperson for eczema ointment Eucrisa. Why share your journey? I have had eczema since I was a kid, then after I had Birdie, I had an eczema flare that was a lot more intense than I had ever experienced before. I'm open about my insecurities and my flaws, and if I can help inspire anybody to feel better about themselves, that's why I'm here.

—BRITTANY TALARICO

Family Time Johnson gave Simpson (with her family in a 2019 Instagram post) a new wedding band for her birthday. "It's very special," she says.

Yifei Liu

Meet the New Mulan!

Yifei Liu is ready for her Hollywood moment. Acting in her native China since age 15, Liu will make her American film debut as the warrior heroine when the live-action Mulan adaptation hits Disney+ on Sept. 4. "We're all waiting for this," the actress, 33, says of the movie, whose March release was postponed because of the coronavirus outbreak. While she's a "big fan" of the 1998 animated Mulan, Liu also adores more recent hits: "Frozen 1 and 2 always make me cry. They're inspiring to everybody, not just children!" After playing a Disney princess, Liu anticipates expanding her career in the U.S. "I want people to see me on a wider stage," says Liu, who spends her downtime reading and doing yoga and Pilates. "This is really a dream moment." —DANA ROSE FALCONE

Princess in Training "One day I just felt like I couldn't get up," Liu recalls of her prep to play a warrior. "Your body's like, 'Give me a break.'"

Rachael Leigh Cook Embraces Love Again

With Wayans in Love, Guaranteed.

Rachael Leigh Cook is returning to her rom-com roots. The actress, who became a darling in 1999's hit makeover movie She's All That, is now producing and starring in Netflix's new meet-cute romantic comedy Love, Guaranteed, costarring Damon Wayans Jr. "I brought our amazing writers a premise, and they filled out everything else," she says of the new film, streaming Sept. 3. "I did feel somewhat worried about having an opportunity this big, but everything was kind of fantastic." When fans still recognize her from She's All That, "my vanity is always delighted that I can be identified as the same person as I was 20 years ago!" says Cook, now 40. The actress, whose separation from actor Daniel Gillies, 44, was announced in June 2019 after 15 years of marriage, has been learning how to navigate a pandemic as a single mom to their two kids, Charlotte, 6, and Theodore, 5. "I don't have any Instagram-beautiful sourdough bread to show for it, I barely have my sanity," she says. But she has found love again. Cook is now dating a producer and high school swim coach, set up by their mutual friend, actress Judy Greer. "He's one of the kindest, smartest, silliest, most incredibly wonderful humans you could want to meet," Cook says of her beau, whom she'd rather not name. "And I'm lucky he's also tolerating me."

Excited Parents-to-Be
Roberts shared a happy photo of herself and Hedlund Aug. 30.

Emma Roberts' Pregnancy Joy

Emma Roberts has a baby on the way! The 29-year-old actress announced Aug. 30 that she and her boyfriend, actor Garrett Hedlund, 36, are expecting their first child together, a boy. "Me…and my two favorite guys," Roberts captioned a series of photos on Instagram of her and Hedlund, as she cradled her baby bump. "They are beyond excited to be having a boy," says a source close to Hedlund. The pair were first spotted holding hands in New York City in March 2019 (the same month a source confirmed that Roberts and her American Horror Story costar Evan Peters had called off their engagement after seven years together) and have since become "very serious," the source says. "Garrett thinks Emma is amazing. They will be great parents."

The actress and Hedlund have kept their relationship private, but after they revealed their baby news, family and friends were quick to congratulate them. Roberts's aunt Julia Roberts commented, "Love you," while her Scream Queens costar, new mom Lea Michele, wrote, "You will be the greatest mama. I love you Em! Boy moms together."

The former Mad Men star and St. Louis native, 49, is raising funds for community theaters

Why I Care
PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

I've always been a champion of arts programs because I was a beneficiary. I was raised by a single mom, who put me in every publicly funded program she could because she wanted me to learn to appreciate the arts. After college I was incredibly lucky to be connected with the St. Louis Actors' Studio—I performed in a few plays that earned me my actor's equity card, which legitimized my chosen profession. I wouldn't be where I am without access to that, so a few of us who got our start with small theater companies—myself, Sterling K. Brown, Beau Willimon—we're raffling off virtual hangouts with us to raise funds for them. We're starting in St. Louis, and then hopefully, if we raise enough money, we can parcel it out to other communities. The arts are so important for fostering and maintaining a sense of community, which is so important, especially now.

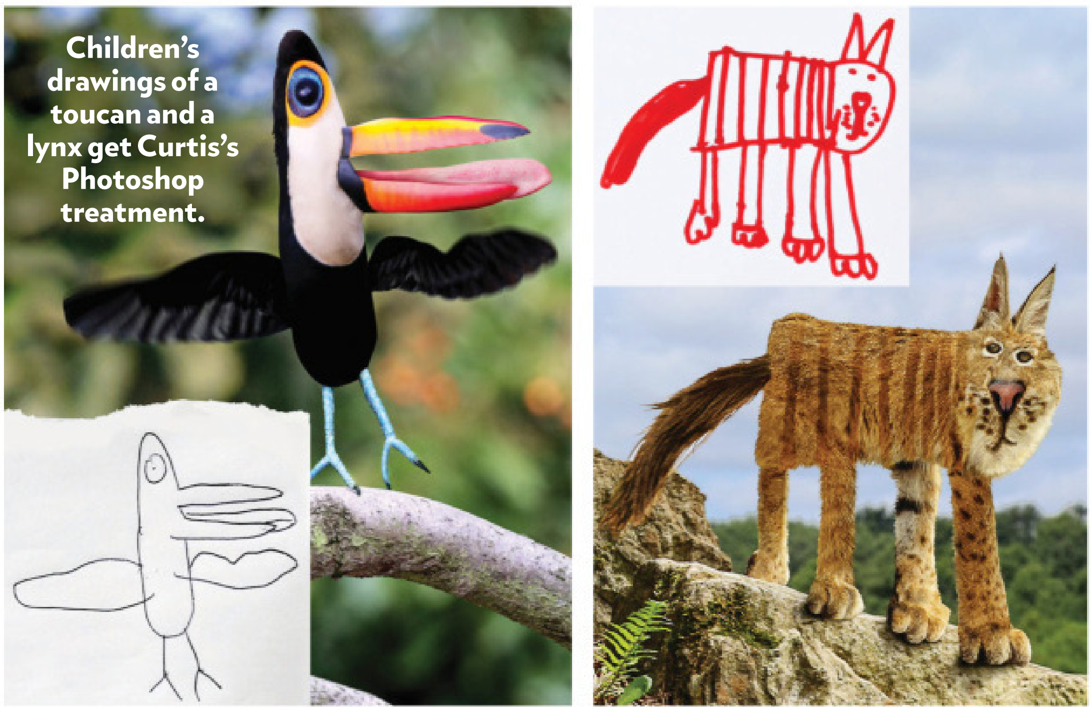
SAN FRANCISCO

Dill and Pickles spend their days swimming, snacking and snuggling—the dog and pig pals, both 3, even love riding around their neighborhood in a stroller together. "We get a lot of double takes everywhere we go," says their owner, social media influencer Maddie Johnson, 27. Johnson adopted Pickles first, and French bulldog Dill came four months later. "The two of them instantly bonded," Johnson says. "I joke that Dill is half pig and Pickles is half dog." Over the past three years she's documented their friendship—in matching outfits—on the Instagram @livingwithpickles, which has more than 100,000 followers. Johnson also authored a children's book about the pair, How Tickles Saved Pickles, and has raised more than $100,000 for animal rescues. "These two are always up to something," she says. "Pickles is the mastermind behind everything—he uses his brain, and Dill uses his agility skills."



Children's drawings of a toucan and a lynx get Curtis's Photoshop treatment.

A Dad Brings Kids' Drawings to Life

CHEDDINGTON, ENGLAND

Tom Curtis had a moment of inspiration looking at his son's quirky drawing of a make-believe creature. "I thought, 'What if animals actually did look like that?'" says the 45-year-old creative director at an ad agency. Using Photoshop, Curtis started turning the primitive artwork of his two sons and other kids into quasi-realistic animals and posting them on the Instagram account @thingsihavedrawn. Each re-creation takes about 10 hours. Says Curtis: "I'll piece it together, like a bit of a jigsaw."

THE BEST STUFF TO WATCH, READ & LISTEN TO THIS WEEK!

Edited By Tom Gliatto

Suits: Ray Panthaki and Hilary Swank.

NETFLIX | Away

Hilary Swank commands a mission to Mars

DRAMA Much like going for a walk in space, Away takes getting used to. Even though it has a dramatically charged concept—you have no less than Oscar winner Hilary Swank heading up an international crew on a three-year mission to Mars—the opening episodes float along calmly, without too much suspense and even less of a sense of intergalactic-postcard awe. But eventually you feel a gravitational pull, and the show becomes rewardingly moving—Away isn't so much about exploring the final frontier as it is about charting the constellation of emotions that connect the crew members to one another and to their families back on Earth. It's actually a domestic ensemble drama—it even has what you'd call a Christmas episode. Emma (Swank) has left behind a daughter and a husband (Josh Charles) who suffered a medical crisis even as the mission was getting ready for liftoff. Their communication will grow more tenuous as the Mars module pulls farther away from Earth. Meanwhile, Emma deals with professional disagreements and disciplinary problems with tact, firmness and fairness. (In space no one can go to HR.) Swank's taut, thoughtful performance is essential to the whole enterprise. If you were a Martian, you'd be grateful she was the one Earth sent. (Launches Sept. 4)

Kidman and Grant are trapped in a very public scandal.

HBO | The Undoing

Nicole Kidman's world is turned upside down—again

DRAMA This may be the TV event of the fall: It's an HBO series starring Nicole Kidman, whose Big Little Lies was a phenomenon and possibly the best vehicle in the versatile actress's career (she won an Emmy for season 1). In this six-episode story, based on Jean Hanff Korelitz's thriller You Should Have Known, she and Hugh Grant play a couple who seemingly have it all—until Something Very Bad happens. We expect suspense, glamour and wrenching life-coming-apart-at-the-seams melodrama. After all, it's not called The Fixer-Upper. (Oct. 25, 9 p.m.)

STARZ | Power Book II: Ghost

DRAMA In the first of four planned spinoffs of the hit crime drama Power, Tariq (Michael Rainey Jr.) is a busy man, juggling Ivy League academics with dealing drugs for Mary J. Blige's Monet (right) to afford a lawyer (Method Man) for his mom (Naturi Naughton), who's charged with killing his dad. (Sept. 6, 9 p.m.)

FROM TOP: NIKO TAVERNISE/HBO; MYLES ARONOWITZ/STARZ

FOX | Filthy Rich

COMEDY-DRAMA The hour-long Filthy Rich is about a family of southern televangelists paying dearly for their indiscretions—and we're not talking about the Falwells. Freshly widowed, Margaret Monreaux (Sex and the City's Kim Cattrall) learns that her holy-roller husband fathered three illegitimate children and included them in his will. Rich promises to be both stylish and sharply funny (Cattrall's specialties). Here's hoping it's the rollicking offspring of Succession and Dirty Sexy Money. (Sept. 21, 9 p.m.)

FX | Fargo

DRAMA Absent since 2017—that was the Ewan McGregor season—the great and grimly entertaining crime-anthology series returns with another casting coup: Chris Rock stars in the saga of two rival Mobs in Kansas City in 1950. The cast includes Timothy Olyphant, Ben Whishaw and Jason Schwartzman. (Sept. 27, 10 p.m.)

Q&A

Lamorne Morris

The New Girl alum, 37, stars in Hulu's comedy Woke, premiering Sept. 9

What drew you to make a comedy about serious issues?
After New Girl, I wanted to do something that had social stakes to it. I wanted subject matter that provoked conversation.

How would you describe the show?
It's about a guy who's struggling to figure out who he is. One day he gets accosted by the police and that opens his eyes to the world around him.

In the first episode, your character Keef, a cartoonist, is falsely accused of a crime and becomes the victim of police brutality. How difficult was it to shoot that scene?
It was scary, to be honest. I was overcome with emotion based on the centuries of racism, abuse and horrendous acts happening to people that look exactly like me.

What do you hope fans take from the show?
I want people to walk away with a dialogue in mind that they want to have with someone.

Immersive novels, transporting mysteries and reckonings with race and 'otherness' in America

Edited by KIM HUBBARD

Sigrid Nunez
What Are You Going Through
Emotionally intense and impossible to put down, this intimate novel about a woman asked to help a terminally ill friend end her life is leavened with wit and tenderness.

Anthony Horowitz
Moonflower Murders
Well-loved for his fiendishly clever plots, Horowitz (Magpie Murders) strikes again with a tantalizing mystery within a mystery—and a tip of the hat to Agatha Christie.

Bryan Washington
Memorial
In Houston, two young men—one Black, one Japanese-American—are lovers, but it's complicated. An exhilarating modern take on a timeless theme.

Nick Hornby
Just Like You
Amid the clamor of pre-Brexit Britain, a 40-year-old white, newly single mom falls for the 22-year-old Black clerk at the butcher shop. A provocative yet sweet romantic comedy.

Claudia Rankine
Just Us
Rankine uses poetry, prose, images, research and stories to illuminate the ways white people and those of color see race and racism differently. A thought-provoking exploration of our preconceptions—and how they must be challenged.

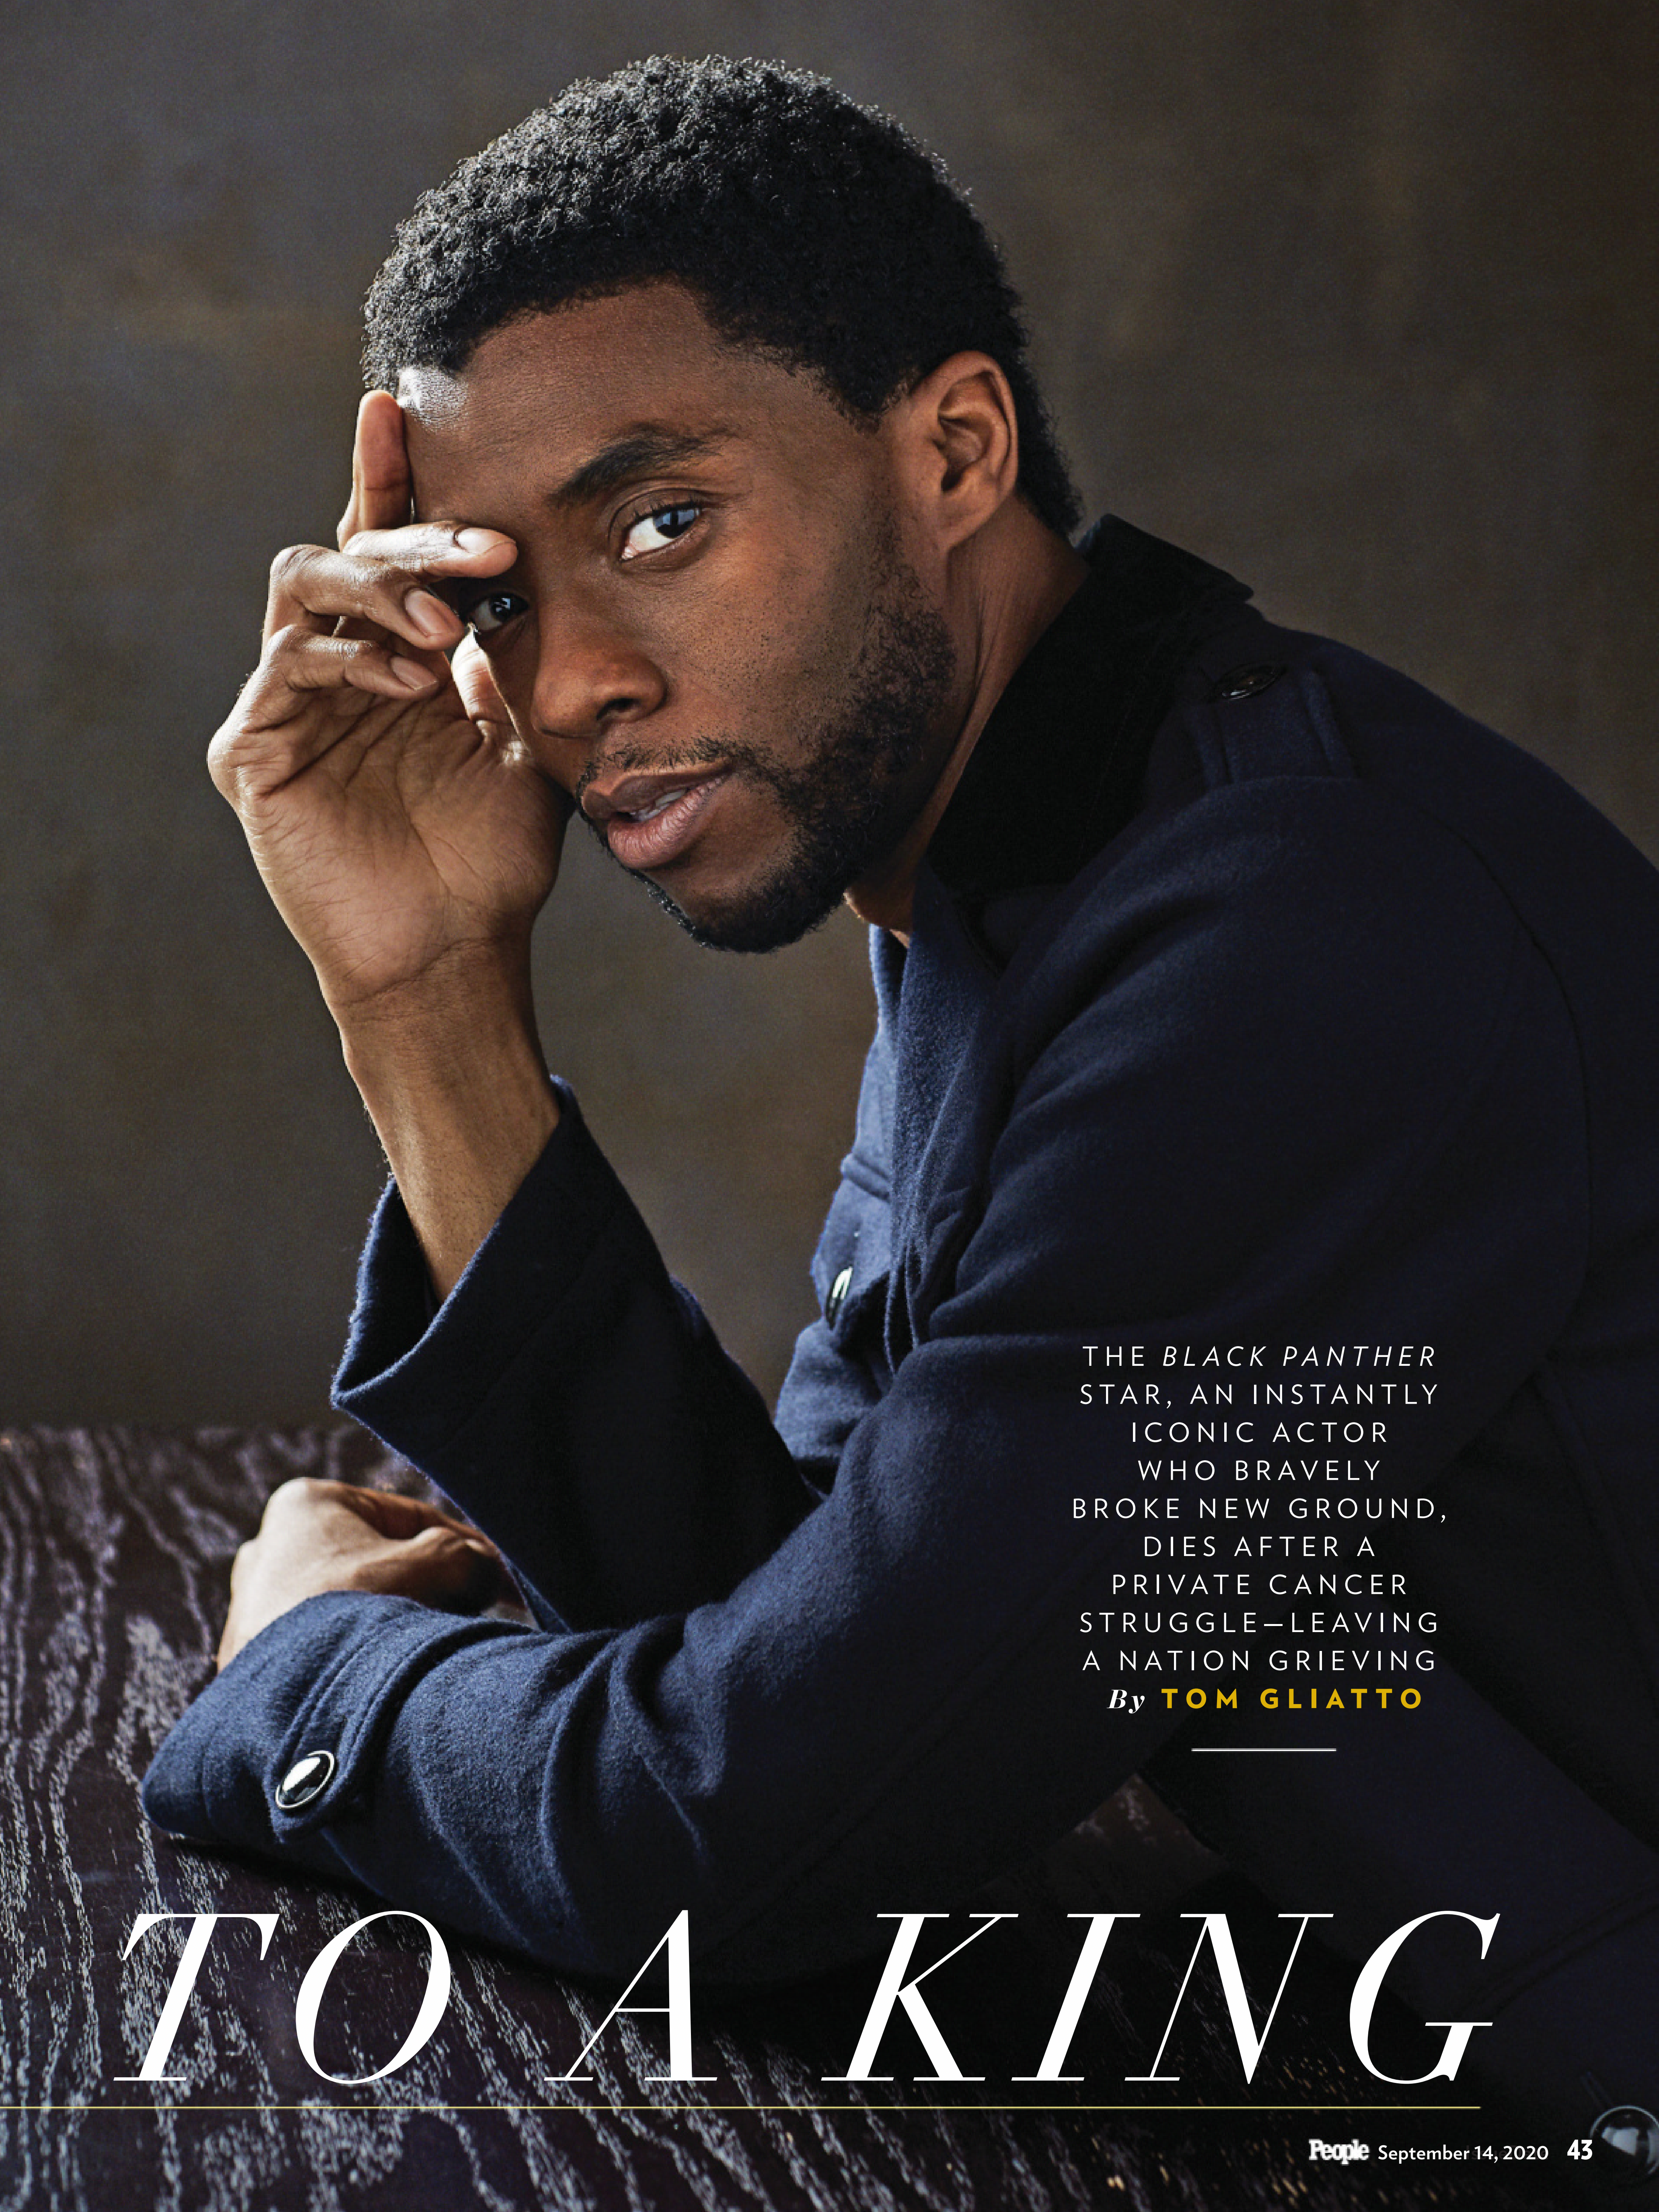
FAREWELL



TO A KING

THE BLACK PANTHER STAR, AN INSTANTLY ICONIC ACTOR WHO BRAVELY BROKE NEW GROUND, DIES AFTER A PRIVATE CANCER STRUGGLE—LEAVING A NATION GRIEVING

By TOM GLIATTO

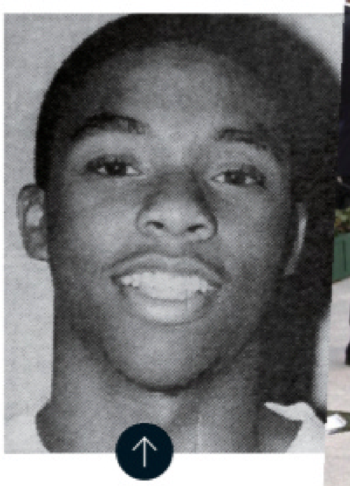
In the last weeks of his life, Chadwick Boseman sent out a poignant, powerful text message. “Inhale and exhale this moment,” he wrote, “and thank God for the unique beauties and wonders of the day. We should take advantage of every moment we can to enjoy the simplicity of God’s creation, whether it be clear skies and sun or clouded over with gloom.”

It was a rare emotional statement from the 43-year-old star of the groundbreaking superhero movie Black Panther—and it would reverberate among millions of fans mourning his death. Josh Gad, his costar in 2017’s Marshall and recipient of the text, made it public following the stunning news that the actor famed as T’Challa, leader of Marvel’s fictional African kingdom Wakanda, had succumbed to colon cancer Aug. 28. Only a handful of close friends had been aware that Boseman was even ill. “I can’t even wrap my mind around this loss,” said Panther costar Danai Gurira. “A loss resonating in my own heart as well as around the globe.”

Confirming his death, his family revealed that Boseman had been struggling with stage 3 and then stage 4 colon cancer for much of his too-brief career—since 2016, the year of Captain America: Civil War, the film that introduced him as Black Panther. “A true fighter, Chadwick persevered through it all and brought you many of the films you have come to love so much,” his family said. “From Marshall to Da 5 Bloods, August Wilson’s Ma Rainey’s Black Bottom and several more—all were filmed during and between countless surgeries and chemotherapy.” His loved ones were with him when he died at home in L.A., including wife Simone Ledward, 30, whom he married recently after a relationship of several years.



Away from Wakanda

Boseman played basketball at T.L. Hanna High in Anderson, S.C. (in 1993, above). He recently married Simone Ledward (with him in 2019). “She was his rock, very centered and calming,” says a source. “They were very loving and happy together.”

The immediate worldwide outburst of grief befitted the man loved and celebrated for his noble, kingly performance as Black Panther. The film’s impact went far beyond its $1.3 billion box office. Panther was not only Marvel’s first film led by a Black superhero but the first to feature a principally Black cast, which included Angela Bassett, Lupita Nyong’o and Michael B. Jordan. (A Panther sequel had been projected for 2022.) LeBron James,

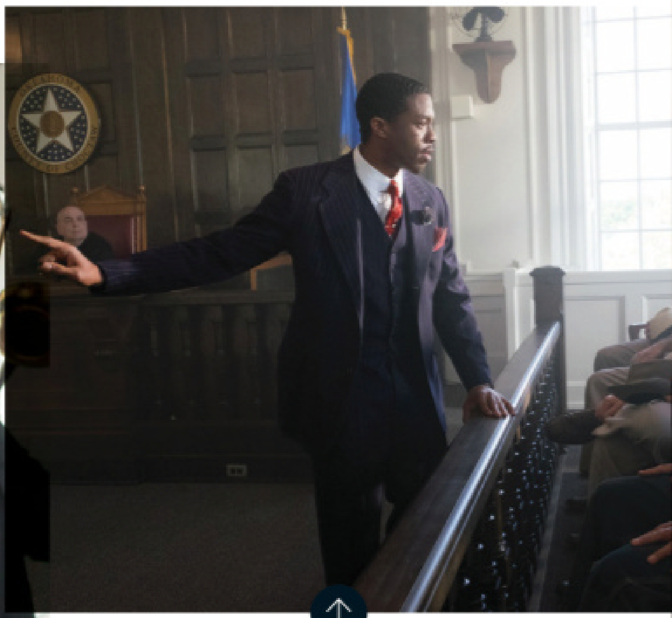
In his breakthrough role he was Jackie Robinson, the first Black player in the major leagues. The ballplayer’s widow, Rachel, told him she was “overjoyed” by the 2013 film.

Get On Up

The Godfather of Soul’s daughter Dr. Yamma Brown thought Boseman was “Oscar-worthy” in this 2014 biopic of her father. “Chadwick was the real deal.”



Marshall

He won acclaim for his 2017 performance as Thurgood Marshall, the Supreme Court’s first Black justice. The actor “was beyond talented,” said costar Josh Gad.

at the start of the L.A. Lakers' games against the Portland Trail Blazers on Aug. 29, crossed his arms in the "Wakanda Forever" salute. On social media families posted images of children conducting Black Panther memorials. "Chadwick told the world stories at a time when we needed them most and made sacrifices to do so," says Marvel Studios president Kevin Feige. "If he had to leave us—which is unfair, unfathomable and crushing—he did so with a blaze of meaning fit for a king."

His friend Ryan Coogler, Panther's director, remembered an actor who "had the warmest laugh in the world, and eyes that seen much beyond his years but could still sparkle like a child seeing something for the first time." According to Coogler, it was wholly in character that the star decided to keep his illness hidden: "Because he was a caretaker, a leader and a man of faith, dignity and pride, he shielded his collaborators from his suffering." Spike Lee, who directed Da 5 Bloods, said the actor withstood the challenges of filming in Thailand. "It was hot, jungles, mountains, and Chadwick was there with us all the way. I never, ever suspected that anything was wrong." Although Boseman spoke warmly of his family, he was always guarded with the public. "I like the fact that people don't know a lot about me," he once told People. Indeed, it was only at his death that his family also confirmed his marriage to his longtime love Ledward, a musician. He first mentioned her publicly at 2019's NAACP Image Awards, where he said, "Simone, you're with me every day…love you." Boseman "lived a beautiful life," said Coogler. "And he made great art. Day after day, year after year. That was who he was."

> 'He was calm. Assured. Constantly studying'

> —BLACK PANTHER DIRECTOR RYAN COOGLER

Boseman was an uncommonly thoughtful actor who in less than a decade assembled a sterling body of work, much of it exploring the Black experience. "I

A Hero Rises
Black Panther* "was a moment of incredible pride and joy" for Black audiences, says writer Nkenge Touré. Inset: Boseman and the cast received a Screen Actors Guild Award.

Paying It Forward
"If I can make people's lives better in a given day, I am willing to do that," said Boseman (at St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in 2018, left, and Howard University that same year).

didn't choose this path, this path chose me," he said of playing legends like Jackie Robinson (in 2013's 42) and James Brown (in 2014's Get On Up). He deeply understood the significance of his work. "We know what it's like to be told there isn't a screen for you to be featured on, a stage for you to be featured on," he said at the Screen Actors Guild Awards.

Quiet and commanding, he "could be intimidating" on-set, says Black Panther executive producer Nate Moore. "But he wasn't intimidating to prove a point. He just believed in what he was doing—any given thing—so intently that he demanded that same intensity of belief, or at least consideration of thought, from whoever was in his proximity." Coogler remembers him ending days on the Panther set by telling him: "This is Star Wars, this is Lord of the Rings, but for us... and bigger!" He used his star power off-camera too, as a vocal supporter of Black Lives Matter. His last Tweet on Aug. 11 encouraged fans to vote. "As famous as Chadwick was, he was so kind and thoughtful. He was a listener," says vice-presidential candidate Kamala Harris, a fellow Howard University graduate and friend. "He had such dignity, and he gave people dignity. Chadwick inspired people to see something in themselves, to see something in each other."

And yet this phenomenal star was in his mid-30s before he had his first starring role, in 42. He grew up the youngest of three boys in Anderson, S.C. His mother was a nurse; his father worked at a textile factory. As a young Black man in the South, he faced racism—"I've been called 'n----r,' run off the road by a redneck, seen trucks flying Confederate flags on the way to school"—but he found inspiration from his older brother Kevin, 48, who became a dancer. "He had the resolve to be like, 'No—I have something; I'm going to do it anyway, right or wrong,'" Boseman said. "And he was right." Initially interested in becoming a writer or director, he studied at Howard with actress Phylicia Rashad as a mentor. "I loved Chadwick," Rashad says. "All of his instructors loved him." Recognizing his promise, she arranged for him to study in a summer program at England's Oxford University—his way was secretly paid by Denzel Washington. ("There is no Black Panther without Denzel Washington," Boseman later said.) By the time Boseman returned to Howard in 2018 to give the commencement address, he was renowned as T'Challa. He was nervous, recalls Howard president Wayne A.I. Frederick, but "he put his heart and soul into that speech," telling the students: "Purpose is an essential element of you. It is the reason you are on the planet at this particular time in history." Always grateful for the opportunities he had received, says Frederick, "he was determined to pay it forward."

THE FACTS ABOUT COLON CANCER

Although colon cancer is the second-most-common cause of cancer death among men and women combined in the United States, "it is also one of the most curable cancers if we find it early," says Dr. Mark Pochapin, president of the American College of Gastroenterology. Cases in patients as young as Boseman are rare but increasing. "Any sustained symptoms shouldn't be ignored," Pochapin says, including rectal bleeding, changes in bowel movements and constipation. According to an article published in the American Cancer Society's journal, Black Americans have a 20 percent higher rate of incidence and a 40 percent higher mortality rate. "There are real disparities," says Pochapin, noting that the American Cancer Society now recommends colonoscopies to screen for the disease starting at age 45 instead of 50, and earlier for those with a family history. Treatment often includes surgery followed by chemotherapy. "People should not be afraid now to talk to a doctor about screening," he says. "We're constantly making breakthroughs in the world of cancer."

It was in this regard, perhaps, that Boseman was most truly heroic. Though ill himself, in 2018 he went to Memphis to visit the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital for children with cancer and life-threatening diseases. "Chadwick insisted on staying until he had the chance to greet every single patient," says Richard C. Shadyac Jr., head of the hospital's fundraising and awareness organization.

Even in recent months, Boseman continued quietly reaching out. Moore last talked to him about a request from the Make-a-Wish Foundation. "We worked together to get a young boy a voice note from T'Challa as well as a package of toys—no easy feat when we weren't allowed to leave our homes or go to the office. But Chad figured out how to make it work, because he cared so intently." Moore's last text message from the star became words he would treasure. "It broke me, man," Boseman wrote. "But we need to do that for them. People deserve abundant life, special moments. They've been through hell battling disease. If we were able to ease their suffering and bring joy for a moment … then we made a difference in his life."

FAMILY PLEA
"We need healing," Blake's mom, Julia Jackson (left, with attorney Ben Crump, center, and Blake's father, Jacob Blake Sr.), said at an Aug. 25 press conference.

Outrage & Anguish

JUSTICE FOR JACOB

THE POLICE SHOOTING OF YET ANOTHER BLACK MAN—THIS TIME WITH 7 BULLETS TO HIS BACK—AGAIN IGNITES PROTESTS DEMANDING CHANGE

By JEFF TRUESDELL

Hours after Jacob Blake was shot by a police officer in Kenosha, Wis., on Aug. 23, the 29-year-old was lying in a Milwaukee hospital with his wrists and ankles shackled to the bed. As his frantic mother entered the room, she looked at her son and at the police officer stationed by his side. And Julia Jackson sought help the way she knew best: in prayer. "[Jacob] asked the police officer that was in the room with us if he was a man of faith," she recalled later. "He responded yes, in short. He asked him to pray with us. The three of us prayed together."

Even as agonizing questions remain about why a white officer shot her Black son seven times in the back at point-blank range and in front of his three young sons, and after nights of violent clashes between protesters and police, Jackson publicly pleaded for calm. "If Jacob knew what was going on as far as that goes, the violence and destruction, he would be very unpleased," she said at an Aug. 25 press conference, noting that property damage "doesn't reflect my son or my family." Calling on "citizens, police officers, firemen, clergy, politicians," she pleaded to "do Jacob justice on this level and examine your hearts. We need healing."

But the wounds of a nation anguished over the recent deaths of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor, both killed by police, seem painfully raw.

BLACK LIVES MATTER

ATHLETES UNITED
The Milwaukee Bucks' boycott spread through pro sports. NBA playoffs resumed Aug. 29 after the league agreed to address social justice and voting issues.

AN ARMED TEEN, A DEADLY PROTEST

Three days after Jacob Blake's shooting, Kyle Rittenhouse (above, left), a 17-year-old from Antioch, Ill., was arrested and charged with the first-degree reckless homicide of Joseph Rosenbaum, 36, and first-degree intentional homicide of Anthony Huber, 26, plus attempted first-degree intentional homicide for wounding Gaige Grosskreutz, 26. An attorney for the teen said Rittenhouse was in Kenosha and went to the protests with a friend, intent on protecting businesses. Prosecutors allege Rosenbaum and Huber tried to wrestle Rittenhouse's AR-15-style rifle from him during an Aug. 25 protest in Kenosha. Jailed without bond, Rittenhouse has yet to enter a plea. Said Kenosha County sheriff David Beth: "Are we asking [civilians] to come in and support [us]? I'm not."

As protests continue, Rusten Sheskey, the officer who shot Blake, and two other officers at the scene, Vincent Arenas and Brittany Meronek, are on leave while the state investigates whether to file charges against them. And Blake remains hospitalized, paralyzed from the waist down.

Blake's shooting, captured on video on a bystander's phone, galvanized the most unprecedented professional-sports boycott that has ever unfolded across America. Led by the Milwaukee Bucks of the NBA and then the league as a whole, the boycott was joined by the WNBA, the NHL and several MLB teams and players, to focus attention on police violence and racial injustice. "If you watch that video, you don't need to be Black to be outraged," said L.A. Clippers coach Doc Rivers, the son of a police officer. "You need to be American and outraged. It's amazing why we keep loving this country, and this country does not love us back. We've got to do better. We've got to demand better."

While questions remain about Blake's fateful encounter with police, authorities say officers were responding to a report by a female caller that her boyfriend was present and not supposed to be on the premises. Responding officers attempted to arrest Blake, and officers Sheskey and Arenas both fired Tasers that failed to stop him, according to the Wisconsin Department of Justice. As Blake ignored orders to stop, the officers followed him to an SUV, where his sons—ages 3, 5 and 8—were waiting. And when Blake leaned in the driver's-side door, Sheskey fired seven times, according to the state DOJ. Blake allegedly admitted to possessing a knife, and one was found on the driver's-side floorboard, but he has not been charged in the incident. (The hospital handcuffs, said Kenosha police chief Daniel Miskinis, were because Blake was under arrest on a warrant for a previous alleged sexual-assault charge; when that warrant was vacated, the cuffs were removed. Blake family attorney Ben Crump says that charge is still pending.)

'THEY SHOT MY SON 7 TIMES, LIKE HE DIDN'T MATTER. BUT MY SON MATTERS'
—JACOB BLAKE SR.

What happens next depends on the state investigation, as Blake's family prays for justice. "We are the United States. Have we been united?" asked his mother. "Let's use our hearts, our love and our intelligence to work together, to show the rest of the world how humans are supposed to treat each other. America is great when we behave greatly." ●

Paris Hilton My Nightmare Is Finally Over

THE FORMER REALITY STAR OPENS UP ABOUT THE ABUSE SHE SAYS SHE SUFFERED AT A BOARDING SCHOOL FOR TROUBLED TEENS—AND HOW IT'S HAUNTED HER EVER SINCE

By AILI NAHAS

Photographs by RAMONA ROSALES

After more than 20 years of debilitating night terrors, Paris Hilton is finally getting some good nights' sleep. "I'm not having nightmares anymore, which is a miracle," says the entrepreneur and heiress. "I held on to so much for so long, but now I'm finally able to release it—and it's been very therapeutic."

In her new documentary This Is Paris, premiering Sept. 14 on her YouTube channel, the 39-year-old reveals for the first time the physical and emotional abuse she says she endured as a teen while at the Provo Canyon School in Utah, a painful secret she previously kept hidden. "It was a living hell," says Hilton. Despite the glamour and privilege that characterized her rise to reality TV stardom, Hilton says the trauma led her to years of abusive relationships and trust issues. Now happily in love with her boyfriend of a year, businessman Carter

Family Secrets

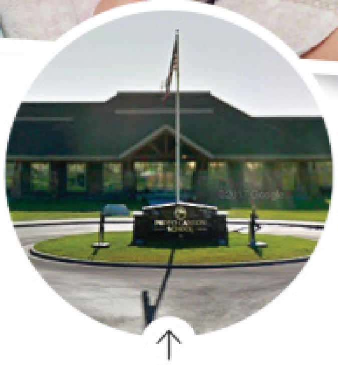
Close Ties
"I think they just wanted me to stay a little girl forever," Hilton says of her parents, Rick and Kathy (with sister Nicky), in 1987.

Troubled Teen
Hilton (at 15) says she had "a good childhood" but rebelled against her parents' "superstrict" rules. At 17, she was sent to Provo.



Provo Canyon School
Hilton says her success "feels like a big 'eff you' to the school. Everything they did to me, well, look at me now."

Reum, 39, Hilton wants the world to see who she really is—and hopes speaking out will prevent others from enduring similar experiences. "The abuse in schools needs to stop," says Hilton. "I will do whatever I can to make that happen."

Born into great wealth (her great-grandfather was hotelier Conrad Hilton), Hilton was raised in Beverly Hills by her father, Rick, the cofounder of a real estate firm, and mother Kathy, a former actress and fashion designer. "I was very sheltered, but we were very tight," Hilton recalls. In 1996 Hilton's family—including siblings Nicky, now 36, Barron, 30, and Conrad, 26—relocated to New York City's opulent Waldorf Astoria Hotel. The temptations of big-city life became irresistible. "It was so easy to sneak out of the hotel and get in a cab and go out," says Hilton, who frequented clubs despite being underage. "My parents were so strict, I just wanted to rebel." When taking away Hilton's phone and credit cards didn't change anything, Rick and Kathy enlisted others to help send Hilton to a so-called behavioral school out of state. "I went to bed like a normal night, and all of a sudden two people were in my room with handcuffs," she says. "I thought I was being kidnapped. They picked me up and carried me out. I saw my parents at the door, and I screamed for them to help me, and then I was gone." Terrified and miserable, Hilton ran away from three schools before ending up at Provo Canyon at 17. "I wanted to run away, but there was no way out," she says.

Over the next 11 months, Hilton says, she was repeatedly abused, physically, emotionally and mentally. "It was all about trying to break you down," says Hilton. "From the moment I woke up until I went to bed, people were screaming in my face. There were infractions, but sometimes even if you didn't do anything wrong, you'd be punished: hitting, strangling, saying terrible things. When the staff heard I wanted to run away, I was put in solitary confinement." In solitary, she says in the documentary, "they'd make people take their clothes off and go in there, like, for 20 hours. . . . I was just freezing, I was starving, I was alone, I was scared." (When reached by People for comment, the school responded that it changed ownership in 2000: "We therefore cannot comment on the operations or patient experience prior to that time.") The once-vibrant teen felt broken. "I was having panic attacks and crying every single day. I hated my life," she says. "We were cut off from the outside world.

Party Girl to Powerhouse

Society Princess
"I just wanted to live my life and not think about [the trauma]," says Hilton (on her 21st birthday in 2002).

The Simple Life
"My fans call me the OG reality star," says Hilton (with costar Nicole Richie in 2003). "I feel proud of that."

Fragrance Empire
Hilton launched her perfume line in 2004; the collection (25 scents and counting) has sold an estimated $2 billion.

Legal Woes
Her 23-day jail stint in 2007 after violating probation for an earlier DUI triggered memories of school: "It was like experiencing hell again."

Deejay Domination
Pre-COVID, Hilton was one of the world's highest-paid deejays, traveling the globe up to 250 days a year for gigs.

Finding Love
"After my last breakup, I thought I'd be alone forever," says Hilton. "If you don't know yourself fully, you can't let anyone in." Her relationship with family friend and entrepreneur Reum (together in June) "was perfect timing," she says. "Carter makes me feel safe. I feel so grateful."

> 'I'm proud of what I've been through—and of the strong woman I am now'
> —PARIS HILTON

If I tried to tell my family what was happening, the staff would grab the phone from me or rip up my letters." Says her mother, Kathy: "We hoped by having Paris in a structured environment, it would keep her safe. . . . It was heartbreaking to learn [that she was not]."

When she turned 18, Hilton was legally able to leave Provo—and never told anyone what happened to her there. "I was ashamed, and I thought no one would believe me," she says. Instead, she partied and became a fixture in the tabloids. "Going out was numbing my pain," says Hilton. "I basically created this entire Barbie persona—the look, the voice—in order to not think about the other parts."

In 2003, just weeks before the premiere of The Simple Life, the reality series that launched her to fame, a sex tape featuring her and a man she was dating was leaked online. "Had I not gone to Provo, I wouldn't have entertained the thought of making the tape or being with a man like that," Hilton says. "I was so confused about relationships. Looking back, I can't believe I let people treat me the way they did." Over the years that followed, says Hilton, who has been engaged twice but never married, she was in five abusive relationships. (She chooses not to name the men.) "I was strangled, hit, grabbed aggressively," she says. "But after being at Provo, it felt normal. I was looking for [love] in all the wrong places."

In 2018 she began filming This Is Paris, which was initially meant to follow her life on tour as a deejay. "I wasn't planning on talking about [the abuse], but I felt like it was finally time. I had buried my feelings for so long—getting it off my chest has helped." In the documentary Hilton also talks to Provo classmates who share their own claims of abuse. "I want these places held accountable," she says. "The survivors need to be heard."

Since starting to tell her story, Hilton says, she feels "happy and safe and free for the first time." The "Paris Hilton" character isn't going away completely. "She's fun for some things," Hilton says with a laugh, "but I'm excited to show the world the grown-up version of me, the real Paris. I'm on to a new life." ●

COLOMBIAN SINGER MALUMA

‘I’m Going to Keep Dreaming’

THE FAST-RISING LATIN SUPERSTAR LOVES MUSIC, HIS FAMILY AND HIS COUNTRY—BUT NOT BEING CALLED HANDSOME

By ANYA LEON

With his boyish smile, movie-star looks and effortless ability to sing about everything from heartbreak to true love, Maluma has become a global hitmaker at just 26 years old. But mention his “Malumaniacs”—the devoted fans who show up outside his home screaming his name—and the Colombian-born reggaeton singer instantly blushes. “I hate when someone says, ‘Oh, you’re handsome,’ ” he says. “People think I’m going to be like, ‘Holy s---, I know.’ It’s totally the opposite. I’m shy!” He’s unabashed about getting steamy onstage with Madonna, but “one thing is what you see and another is actually what I am,” he says. “I’m a regular human being, and that’s what I actually want people to know about me.”

His A-List Collabs

Jennifer Lopez

“I really admire how she keeps a balance between family and work,” says Maluma (with Lopez in July) of his Marry Me costar.

Madonna

“When they told me she wanted to meet me, I was shaking,” he says of meeting the Queen of Pop. Right: The pair performed their song “Medellín” at the 2019 Billboard Music Awards.

His humble approach to fame was molded by his childhood spent in Medellín, Colombia. As a young boy, Maluma (born Juan Luis Londoño Arias) saw his parents struggle financially. "I sold lollipops at school and would bring the money to my mom," he says. Dreaming big, he worked hard in his teen years toward becoming a professional soccer player—"I had scouters looking at me," he says—but also spent hours writing songs after practice. When he was offered an opportunity to visit a recording studio, Maluma took it—and music became his singular focus. "I wrote a lot of songs but never had the chance to actually record," says the singer, who gave up playing soccer at 16. "When I went to the studio for the first time, that was my happiest moment and an experience I wanted for the rest of my life."

A decade later he's seen plenty of career highs already. In the last four years, he racked up 16 No. 1 songs, including collaborations with Shakira and Ricky Martin, on the Billboard Latin charts. His 2018 album F.A.M.E. spawned runaway hits "Corazón" and "Felices los 4" (the songs' videos have reached 1.5 billion views each) and earned him a slew of Latin Grammy nominations and a win for Contemporary Pop Vocal Album. And next year Maluma—who surprised fans late last month with Papi Juancho, a new album named for his edgier alter ego—will make his big-screen debut opposite Jennifer Lopez in the romantic comedy Marry Me. "Doing so many things is not normal," he acknowledges. "But I'm young, and the last two years have been beautiful."

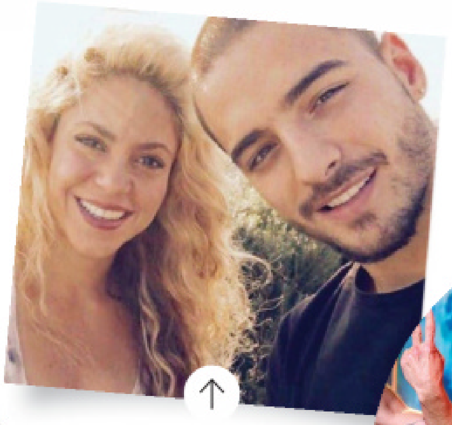
His Passions

Playing Soccer
The onetime pro soccer prospect (appearing at the FIFA World Cup in 2018) hung up his cleats to pursue music.

His Family Ties
"Family is everything for me, and I cherish the moments we share together," says Maluma (with his mom, dad and sister ca. 2019).

Giving Back
With his foundation, Maluma (in 2019) helps Colombia's youth learn the arts.

As his star continues to rise in Hollywood, Maluma is more determined than ever to maintain a deep connection to his Colombian roots. The singer started his charity El Arte de los Sueños (The Art of Dreams), which trains teens in the arts, in 2016 and has donated supplies and supported locals during the coronavirus pandemic. "I am very proud of my culture. I have a duty to always take care of my people," he says. "They have given me my essence of being from Medellín." His biggest inspiration remains his family. While he's often traveling for work, "I still talk to them every day," he says about his dad, Luis, mom Marlli and sister Manuela, whose names he melded to create his stage name. Maluma's shy smile returns as he contemplates his future. "One of my biggest dreams is being a father and getting old with someone next to me," he says. "I feel like I'm just starting. I have so many dreams—and I'm going to keep dreaming." ●



Shakira
The two Colombians (in 2018) have paired up on several steamy hits, including "Chantaje."

Ricky Martin
They surprised fans by performing their single "Vente Pa' Ca" during Maluma's L.A. tour stop in 2018.

SARA EVANS

'I Struggle, but I'm the Happiest Person'

It's been 41 years since Sara Evans nearly died after being hit by a car, but the trauma of that day continues to haunt the country star. "I had severe PTSD and anxiety, but it was the '80s, and I didn't have a name for it," says Evans, 49. "I thought I could handle it because I'm tough." The Missouri native suffered in silence for years before being prescribed an anti-anxiety drug in 2005 following a panic attack. With the help of the medication, which, she says, "saved" her life, Evans can now identify what will trigger a spiral, like PMS or having to leave her three kids (Avery, 21, Olivia, 17, and Audrey, 15) behind for work. In her new memoir, Born to Fly, exclusively excerpted here, Evans traces her rollercoaster journey to the peace she feels today. "I still struggle," she says. "But I'm so grateful for every second of this life."

KRISTIN BARLOWE

Small-town Girl, Big Dreams

Even during her childhood hospitalization in 1979 (top left), "I still felt like the belle of the ball," Evans recalls. "I was the center of attention." The Boonville, Mo., native (above left, ca. 1978, with her siblings and early bandmates Lesley, Matt, Jay and Ashley, and right, playing drums, ca. 2000) felt destined for the spotlight.

Still Standing "I sing better now than I ever have," says Evans, who released a covers album, Copy That, in May. "I want to keep going hard and heavy in my career."

At age 6, Sara was fronting the Evans Family Band with two of her brothers, playing rodeos and senior-citizen facilities. But her childhood was rocked in 1979 when, at age 8, she was hit by a car on the highway bordering her family's farm.

The last thing I remember was a flash of blue. I woke up in a cold room and then came the pain. I was terrified. Both of my legs were in casts. My mom told me that when the car struck me, I landed 80 feet off the road. When they found me, I was curled up in a ball with my left leg mangled and twisted and almost severed in two. They all thought I was dead.

A doctor came in and told my mom that my left leg needed pins put in immediately. But since my concussion was so serious, they were afraid to put me under anesthesia. They would numb my leg and use a hand drill to get the pin into my knee. I remember the nurses holding me down. Every time Dr. Breedlove brought the drill close, I cried out, "Wait!" Imagine someone drilling into your leg while you're wide awake.

Dr. Breedlove finally just told the nurses to hold me down so he could get it over with.

For six agonizing weeks, I remained in that hospital bed. I'd have a sudden, overwhelming feeling of pain and panic consuming me. "I want out of this!" I'd scream, thrashing around till someone held me down and calmed me. I felt like I was being buried alive.

It was the start of her anxiety, PTSD and claustrophobia; she was further traumatized in 1983, when her parents divorced. In 1997 she recorded her first album, and by June 2000—by then married to fellow musician Craig Schelske and mom to their 10-month-old son, Avery—she was riding high on the success of her third studio album, Born to Fly. But she was keeping a secret from everyone, including her family and closest friends.

I was miserable in my marriage. I tried denying it to myself, and I tried to work on it. After the pain of being a child of divorce, I'd made a commitment to never divorce. And of course, people who follow Jesus should not get divorced. We went to marriage counseling several different times off and on for three years, but it just wasn't working. My marriage was disintegrating before my eyes. Long story short, we just were not right for each other.

While she stuck it out with Craig for several more years ("I didn't want my children to come from a broken home. I wanted them to have an idyllic life," she writes), her anxiety mounted, reaching a peak in December 2005, when she suffered a panic attack while traveling to a show.

I couldn't get a grasp on who I was. It's a feeling I've struggled with my whole life anytime I am stressed. I think it's PTSD from my car accident. I have this feeling of "who am I?" It tends to creep up on me after I've had to do a lot of interviews and be on and play the part of "Sara Evans." I don't even like writing about it because I am so afraid of having this feeling.

Home in Nashville for the holidays that year, Sara suffered what she calls an “exhaustion breakdown.”

A doctor prescribed me an antidepressant (which I never took; I knew I wasn’t depressed). He also prescribed an anti-anxiety medication that was really perfect for me. It helped calm the anxiety and panic, but I knew this was a deeper issue. For about ten days I was afraid to leave my house, even to walk from one room to another. All I did was sit in front of the fireplace with the baby girls and read my Bible. I was totally consumed with fear. And for no reason.

I remember dreading the hour when Avery would get off the bus from kindergarten, because I would have to pretend that everything was fine, and it most certainly was not. The girls were both babies, so they had no idea. But I was so afraid he would catch on and start being afraid himself.

In 2006 Sara was back on her feet, enjoying the success of three platinum albums and four No. 1 singles on country radio, and back to marriage counseling. She got an invitation to compete on Dancing with the Stars. The demands of the show were intense.

It was intense at home too. It was becoming clear that my efforts to repair the marriage could not hold off the inevitable. There were times that I would sit in the DWTS chair in the makeup trailer, and they would almost have my makeup done, and someone would say, “Are you okay?” and I would burst into tears and they would have to fix my mascara and tear-streaked foundation. Then one night it all blew up between my husband and me, and I knew that I would not be able to finish DWTS. I had to quit working, focus on my children and figure out what I was going to do.

Sara’s divorce from Craig was finalized in September 2007. Three weeks later she went on a blind date with former pro football player and divorced father of four Jay Barker. They fell hard for each other and wed in June 2008. Sara moved with her three children to the Birmingham, Ala., area so Jay could stay close to his kids.

We are still madly in love and over-the-top attracted to each other. But it hasn’t always been easy. I tend to try everything in my power to avoid fighting, and I let a lot of things go.... I was raised to be old-fashioned and submissive to my husband, and that eliminates a lot of fighting.

In December 2012 a near crash aboard a private plane whose gyroscope failed, forcing the aircraft into a terrifying nosedive and emergency landing, triggered her PTSD “and a kind of depression” that lasted for weeks.

I always keep anti-anxiety meds with me, especially when I have to fly. I am terrified of having a panic attack. On that flight, all of a sudden I was thrown to the floor—stuck there like a giant magnet was holding me down. My brother Matt yelled, “We’re crashing!” All I could think was: It’s actually happening, and I’m going to meet my heavenly Father.

After a miraculous landing, Sara was back home.

As soon as I walked in and saw my babies, I just about fell apart. What if I had died? ... Jay stood in the doorway and said, “Baby, are you okay?” I fell into his arms. He made me feel so safe and loved. Jay is able to hear all of my worries and explain to me how everything is going to be fine.

I don’t stay down for very long. Anytime I start feeling anxious, I do two things: pray for others and count my blessings. It really does work.

Evans hopes her new memoir, Born to Fly, out Sept. 8, will help others. “I want people to feel like they’ve made a new friend after reading it,” she says.

THE TENNIS STAR AND DESIGN LOVER OUTFITTED HER OFF-SEASON RETREAT WITH BUDGET-FRIENDLY FINDS AND CREATIVE DIYS

Winning a major tennis championship typically results in a silver cup or plate, but Madison Keys had a slightly larger reward in mind after a stellar season: her first home.

"I had a really great summer in 2017; I won a title [the Stanford Classic], and then I made the finals of the U.S. Open and I just thought, 'Why not buy a house?' " explains Keys, 25, who just entered her 11th U.S. Open ranked 13th in the world.

Already living in a small apartment in Orlando, the interior-design-obsessed athlete was desperate to outfit a whole home. "Decorating is my way to relax and be creative," Keys admits. Growing up in Florida, "I would just have HGTV on all day,” she adds. “When I was 13, my mom came into my room in the middle of the night, and I was rearranging my furniture. Now, having my own space and being able to put holes in the walls, it’s just amped everything up.”

Keys found her ideal place in a new development and “got to start from scratch, pick my lot, all of the finishes,” she says. “I walked through the show home, like, 18 times. I had taped things out on the floor before I even had drywall up.” The only hiccup was her pro tour schedule, which didn’t allow much time for poring over tile samples. “From my closing to my next tournament was five days,” she recalls. “It was a disaster, to be totally honest. I closed and then pretty much got on a plane.”

But even being out of town couldn’t dampen her desire to get decorating. A proud—and disciplined—bargain hunter, Keys spent the next months surfing furniture sites and scouting sales for her dream pieces. “I did Black Friday, Presidents’ Day, everything I could think of,” she says. Another masterful cheat: “Brick-and-mortar stores will sell you a floor model, especially if it has a tiny scratch in it.”

While on the road, Keys had all her finds sent to her mom’s house in Iowa for safekeeping. A year later, when it finally came time to move in, she had everything shipped in at once, bringing her vision to life for a TV-worthy reveal. “I’m pretty happy,” says Keys, who has been dating her boyfriend, tennis player Bjorn Fratangelo, since 2017. She has also learned to embrace the silver linings, especially during the pandemic. “In a typical year I’m usually home probably 18 to 22 weeks,” Keys adds. “This is the most time I’ve spent at home in a really long time.” ●

Selena Gomez

'I've Finally Found My Rhythm'

THE SINGER TALKS ABOUT HER NEW BEAUTY LINE—AND HOW SHE'S LEARNING TO LOVE HERSELF

Gomez, 28, shows off her matte lip color Inspire. "I love wearing color on my lips," she says. "Then you don't have to do as much everywhere else!"

How has your relationship with makeup changed over the years?
My first experience with makeup was when I was 7 and got my first job [on Barney & Friends]. When I was on Wizards of Waverly Place and getting into music in my preteens and early 20s, makeup became one of my favorite things. And now, during quarantine, it's actually kinda been therapeutic.

To launch Rare Beauty, you asked fans what makes them feel rare. What about you?
I would say I'm proud of my heart, and I like my eyes! I used to look at myself and feel not pretty enough. But I think it's natural for people to feel that way sometimes. You feel like you have to look a certain way or be a certain way, but that's not the case. This line is a way for me to be a part of a beauty community and say, "I'm practicing and I'm learning, and you can too."

You've been open about your mental health struggles over the last few years. What have you learned?
[Being open] isn't an easy thing to ask of someone. I've had to go away a few times for stuff I didn't know [I was struggling with] and was confused by. And then this stigma came: What would people think? And when I thought about it, my first answer was, "I don't care; this is my truth." As far as my career, I'm professional, and I work very hard. At the same time, I do deal with mental health—I wanted that to also be known. In the beginning it seemed hopeless. Sometimes it was a challenge for me to even get out of bed. It took me time, but over the years I've finally found my rhythm. And this has opened my world up big time. I started the Rare Impact Fund [to help underserved communities get mental health treatment]. Our goal is to raise $100 million in 10 years.

How do you practice self-care now?
The first thing I do is find space alone, because I [tend to] push and push myself so I don't have to think about my feelings. I'll go to my room, lie down, drink some water and take a few deep breaths. Then if I need a friend, I call a friend. If I need my therapist, I call my therapist. I've tried a ton of different things, but the one thing I've never stopped doing is asking for help. That was the hardest part, but I truly believe that that's why I'm stronger. On top of the heavy stuff, it's important to just take time with yourself and be gentle. I know it can seem like bull—but it's true!

EMERIL LAGASSE

Caldo Verde Soup with Kale & Chorizo

'My earliest childhood memories are of my mom and I cooking this traditional Portuguese soup together,' says the celebrity chef and restaurateur. 'I have tried many different recipes over the years, and this version hits the spot perfectly'

- 2 Tbsp. olive oil
- 1½ cups finely chopped yellow onion (from 1 [10-oz.] onion)
- 3 garlic cloves, minced
- 2 lbs. russet potatoes, peeled and cut into ½-in. cubes
- 8 cups chicken stock
- ¾ tsp. kosher salt
- ½ tsp. black pepper
- ½ tsp. crushed red pepper
- 8 oz. smoked, cooked Spanish-style chorizo or hot smoked sausage, cut into ½-in. chunks
- 1 bunch (8 oz.) kale, stemmed and cut into ¼-in.-thick slices
- ½ cup chopped fresh cilantro
- ¼ cup chopped fresh flat-leaf parsley
- 2 Tbsp. chopped fresh mint

1. Heat olive oil in a large saucepan or stockpot over medium high. Add onion and garlic, and cook, stirring occasionally, until onion is translucent, about 5 minutes. Add potatoes and chicken stock. Cover and bring to a boil. Remove lid, and stir in salt, black pepper and crushed red pepper. Reduce heat to medium, and simmer, uncovered, until potatoes are tender, about 10 minutes.
2. Stir in chorizo and kale, and continue to simmer, undisturbed, until kale is softened but still slightly crunchy, about 15 minutes. Stir in cilantro, parsley and mint, and season with more salt and black pepper, if desired. Serve hot.

Edible Maple & Chocolate Chip Cookie Dough

'Eating raw cookie dough is a safety no-no, but with this plant-based recipe it's absolutely fine and absolutely delicious!' says the author of the new Naturally, Delicious Desserts cookbook. 'Stir into vanilla ice cream for the ultimate treat'

2 cups (about 7 oz.) almond flour
1 cup (about 3⅛ oz.) oat flour
¼ tsp. sea salt
½ cup pure maple syrup
¼ cup almond butter
2 tsp. vanilla extract
1 cup miniature dark chocolate chips

1. Sift almond flour, oat flour and salt in a medium bowl. Whisk together maple syrup, almond butter and vanilla in a separate small bowl.

2. Stir maple syrup mixture into flour mixture until evenly combined. Fold in chocolate chips. Cover and chill dough until ingredients are hydrated, about 1 hour.

Official Approved Notice from Bankruptcy Court

Sexual Abuse Claims in Boy Scouts Bankruptcy

Regardless of how old you are today or when the sexual abuse occurred, you need to file your claim by 5 p.m. (Eastern Time) on November 16, 2020.

The Boy Scouts of America ("BSA") has filed bankruptcy in order to restructure its nonprofit organization and pay Sexual Abuse Survivors. Please read this notice carefully as it may impact your rights against BSA, BSA Local Councils and organizations that sponsored your troop or pack and provides information about the case, In re Boy Scouts of America and Delaware BSA, LLC, No. 20-10343 (Bankr. D. Del.). This notice is a short summary. For more detail, visit www.OfficialBSAClaims.com or call 1-866-907-2721.

Who Should File a Sexual Abuse Claim?

Anyone who was sexually abused during their time in Scouting, on or before February 18, 2020, must file a claim. This includes sexual abuse in connection with Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, or any entity or activity associated with Scouting. Sexual Abuse Claims include, but are not limited to: sexual misconduct, exploitation, or touching, sexual comments about a person or other behaviors that led to abuse, even if the behavior was not sexual or against the law, and regardless of whether you thought the behavior was sexual abuse or not. These acts could be between a: (1) child and an adult or (2) child and another child.

When and How Should I File a Sexual Abuse Claim?

You should file a claim using the Sexual Abuse Survivor Proof of Claim by November 16, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (Eastern Time). If you do not file a timely Sexual Abuse Claim, you may lose rights against BSA, BSA Local Councils or organizations that sponsored your troop or pack, including any right to compensation. Only BSA is in bankruptcy. If you have a claim against the BSA Local Councils or other organizations, you must take additional legal action to preserve and pursue your rights.

Your information will be kept private. You can download and file a claim at www.OfficialBSAclaims.com or call 1-866-907-2721 for help on how to file a claim by mail. Scouting participants who were at least 18 years of age at the time the sexual abuse began may also have claims related to sexual abuse and should consult the appropriate claim form at www.OfficialBSAclaims.com.

ACT NOW Before Time Runs Out:

File a Sexual Abuse Survivor Proof of Claim.

If your claim is approved, you may receive compensation from the bankruptcy.

Have questions? Call or visit the website for more information.

If a plan to reorganize BSA is approved, it could release claims you hold against certain third parties, including against BSA Local Councils and organizations that sponsored your troop or pack. Please visit the website to learn more.

Other Support

BSA will fund in-person counseling for current or former Scouts or their family. To request in-person counseling, please call 1-866-907-2721 or email restructuring@scouting.org.

Your information will be kept private.

In the new horror-thriller Antebellum, Janelle Monáe (center) plays a successful author who unwillingly time-travels to the Civil War South and must fight her way back. The film, which also stars Gabourey Sidibe (right) and is produced by Sean McKittrick of Get Out and Us, was originally set to be released in April but because of COVID-19 will be available to stream beginning Sept. 18.

THE GMA HOST, 48, IS EXPANDING HIS MSX BY MICHAEL STRAHAN FOR NFL CLOTHING LINE WITH TEAM-SPECIFIC STYLES

Last time I stayed up too late
Saturday night. I was watching movies, and the eyes were burning, but I refused to go to bed because I've learned to rebel against my day job.

Last thing I discovered about myself
That I really enjoy cooking. Every guy swears they can grill and do breakfast, but to actually cook and cut and prep things, it gives me such a great appreciation for real chefs.

Last superstition
My socks. When I get dressed—and I used to do this in football—I look at my socks, and the socks have to tell me which foot they need to be on. Now they have an L and an R on them. I was just ahead of my time.

Last time my dog made me laugh
My dog Enzo made me laugh Sunday morning. If I don't get up, he'll put his head on the bed like, "Uh, big guy. It's time." And then his paws, which he knows is a no-no. I basically work for him.

Last time I faced my fears
I went snorkeling with my twin girls [Sophia and Isabella, 15] in the Bahamas. The whole time I'm thinking "Shark Week." Yeah, we're making memories—of me being terrified.
